Fourth Edition.

ASSASSINATION!

The President Shot.

Arrest of the Assassin.

The Shot Probably Fatal.

This morning witnessed an event unparalleled in the history of the country. The assassination of Lincoln, coming as it did at the close of a long and desperate war and as the last expiring throes of that war's fierce hate and passion, was an infinitely more logical event than this horror.

The assassinated President had made no enemies; had done no man wrong. The heart and soul of good nature, benevolence and peace-loving, his was to all reason and logic the last bosom among our fifty millions to invite the lead of the assassin. It is, of course, too soon to discuss particulars. We can only present the main facts. What the future may bring forth, it is impossible now even to guess, and the occasion is too grave for guess-work.

The news spread rapidly through the city and about the Departments and in a very few minutes men were seen hurrying through the streets toward the depot. Business men rushed to their doors and could hardly be persuaded that the peace of the day had been so violently assaulted.

Intelligence of the event was sent to all the police-stations of the city and the rapid hurrying of mounted police through the streets toward the depot added to the excitement.

THE ASSASSIN'S TALE.

EITHER INSANE OR A GOOD ACTOR.

He is Committed to Jail.
What the Assassin Says.

A CRITIC reporter interviewed the prisoner at his cell at Police Headquarters at a few minutes before 10 o'clock.

The prisoner is a pale, emaciated, small man, with the appearance of an insane person. He gave his name as Charles Guiteau, and his residence as Chicago, and stated that he was a lawyer, theologian, and politician.

He expressed great anxiety to be taken to jail, where he stated he would meet General Arthur, Sherman and Collector Merritt. He states that he will reward all who treat him with respect, and that he has saved his country and Proclaimed Arthur President.

Guiteau says that Garfield cannot live and shall not live.

He was taken to jail at 10 o'clock. The weapon was a British bull-dog, five-barreled, nickel-plated revolver, and very heavy. The handle is of bone and four shots were still in the weapon.

An Applicant for Office.
Guiteau, it seems, is a disappointed applicant for office. The position he desired was consul to Marseilles.

HOW THE DEED WAS DONE.
EXCITEMENT AT THE DEPOT.

The assassination was so quickly and quietly effected that it was not until the President had fallen and the assassin had escaped from the building that the fact became generally known. Then a crowd soon assembled, and in less than ten minutes Sixth street and B street were

Packed with People and the news of the horrible affair flew from mouth to mouth and spread over the city like wildfire. An attempt was made to rush into the building, and cries were raised to Lynch the Assassin.

but a strong force of policemen summoned by telephone arrived promptly on the scene and preserved order. In the meantime the

President Had Been Carried to a Room Upstairs and physicians were summoned. Secretary

Blaine was with the President and is still attending him.

Statement of the Officer Who Made the Arrest.

Policeman Kearney, of the Island Precinct, who arrested the assassin, makes the following statement of the shooting: "Guiteau arrived at the depot about an hour ahead of the Presidential party and moved about and acted quite restless. The officer's attention was attracted by his movements, but he did not watch the assassin particularly until he heard him ask a hackman at the Sixth-street depot if he could drive him off."

In a Hurry If Required.
"I thought," said Kearney, "that that was a peculiar thing, but before I could follow it up closer I saw

The President's Party
driving down Sixth street to the depot and I had to go and look after them. They drove to the B street entrance.

Secretary Blaine was with the President and the two entered the depot together. The President walked up to me and asked how much time he had before the train left. It was 20 minutes after 9, I saw by looking at my watch, and I told the President that he had ten minutes. Just as he thanked me

I Heard a Pistol Shot.
and turning, I saw the man that I had been watching previously standing about ten feet away in the shadow of the main entrance to the waiting room, leveling his pistol across his arm. He

Fired a Second Shot
before I could speak to him and darted between myself and the President and Secretary Blaine into the street. The President reeled and Fell Just in Front of Me. as he fell he said something that I could not exactly understand, and Secretary Blaine, with a terrified look pushed toward him, exclaiming:

"My God, He has been Murdered! What is the Meaning of This?"

I did not stop longer, but ran out after the assassin and arrested him just as he started across B street toward Sixth.

"In God's Name, Man,"
I shouted, "What did you shoot the President for?" and his answer was,

"I am a Statist, and Want Arthur for President."

He still carried his pistol in his hand; it was a large California revolver of large calibre, with a bone handle. He appeared perfectly cool and offered not the slightest resistance, but went quietly to Police Headquarters with me.

WHO GITEAU IS.

What Col. Ingersoll Says of Him.
HIS INSANITY FEIGNED.

Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll told THE CRITIC reporter that he knew the assassin well and had always regarded him as a quiet, sober and sane man. He has no special profession, but has been an office-holder and office-seeker. Col. Ingersoll is of the opinion that his insanity is feigned.

THE ACT PREMEDITATED.
Guiteau Waiting for a Chance.

The assassin's resolution to murder President Garfield was perfectly intended by the close watch he kept upon the movements of his Excellency for the past few days. Mr. Brooke Darrell, of the Treasury Department, immediately recognized him as identical with a man whom he had seen

Hanging About the Neighborhood of the White House for some time past, and the policeman at the depot, Officer Pat Kearney, who arrested Guiteau, says he has noticed him suspiciously lurking about the depot and Sixth street for three days past, watching the carriages and vehicles as they arrived or departed with a keenness that looked as if he meant business of some character.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.
STATEMENT OF ANOTHER EYE-WITNESS.

As the President entered the ladies' waiting-room of the Baltimore & Potomac depot, he was shot twice through the back, possibly fatally, by a disappointed office-seeker, Chas. Guiteau, of Chicago. He fell to the floor, and the first to reach him was Mrs. Sarah B. White, lady in charge of the ladies' waiting room, who saw the President enter, and the man raise his hand and fire. She was about 20 feet from the President when shot. Very few were in the waiting room and no one immediately with the President. Secretary Blaine, who was following the President, saw the shooting, but declined to give a statement until he makes an official one. Mrs. White raised his head and was holding him when his colored servant came up and relieved her, saying: "Oh! my poor Mr. President." Then Secretary Blaine and others came up and the President was carried upstairs, and Dr. Townsend, who was the first doctor to arrive, proceeded to administer restoratives and care for him.

Mr. E. B. Foss, who was very close but did not see the shooting, was the first to run for a doctor, and brought Dr. Smith Townsend, the Health Officer.

Mr. Foss says that he saw the assassin holding a letter in his hand, and was told that a newsboy got the letter, which was addressed to Senator Sherman, saying, "I have shot the President twice; so he will die easily."

Looking About the Depot.
Mrs. White says she has several times seen the assassin waiting about the depot and always seemed excited, and about a week ago she noticed him particularly, and he evidently seemed to be waiting for some one; and to-day he was walking about the waiting-room about half an hour before the President came. There was no alteration nor conversation between the President and his assassin, so that it is evident it was a premeditated, cold-blooded assassination. Mr. White says Guiteau has a full face.

THE PRESIDENT REMOVED TO THE WHITE HOUSE.
At Ten Twenty
the President was removed from the depot to the ambulance and conveyed to the White House. THE CRITIC was standing in the entrance as the still-breathing body of the President was carried out. The face was as blanched as that of a corpse, the eyes dead closed and that peculiar half-languid, half-nervous twitching of the muscles indicative of internal bleeding. Postmaster Ainger, who was present at the shooting, said as the body passed by, "I have been in many a battle and have seen many men mortally wounded, and never a one with a face that more clearly showed certain death than the President's."

A REVENGEFUL ACT.
Guiteau Formerly Consul and Endowed to be Reinstated.

Guiteau held the position of consul to Marseilles during the last administration, having been appointed through the influence of General Logan. When this administration came into power he was recalled at the desire of Secretary Blaine, and some charge that in his deprecation he resorted to the pistol for revenge. One thing is reasonably certain, he was consul at Marseilles and wanted to be returned.

What the President Said After the Shooting.
Col. Robert Ingersoll was one of the very first who spoke to the President after he was conveyed to the room upstairs. The Colonel tenderly asked him how he felt, and the President responded:

"I feel as strong as would be expected under the circumstances, but I have a peculiar sensation in my feet."

This some of the physicians say is a bad foreboding.

Dr. Woodward's Opinion of the Wounds.
Dr. Woodward, of the Surgeon-General's Office, states that the wounds are so serious that nothing save the President's robust constitution and temperate habits can save his life.

AT THE JAIL.
AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC.

GITEAU'S ACT PREMEDITATED.
The party that accompanied Charles Guiteau to the jail were Lieut. Eckloff, Detectives McElfresh and Austin, also Private St. Lewis. On the arrival at the jail he was thoroughly searched and committed to a cell.

The officers of the jail identified Guiteau as the man who had been down inspecting the jail on Saturday last.

An Open Letter to the Public was found on the person of Guiteau, which stated that the act was premeditated and that it would immortalize the assassin as the savior of the Republican party; Arthur would assume the chair and save the country from its impending fate. His only sorrow or pity, he said, was for Mrs. Garfield, who would not mourn, however, the personal bereavement which would work so great a public good.

A THIRD ACCOUNT.

WHAT ANOTHER EYE-WITNESS SAYS.

Everett O. Foss, of Dover, N. H., who was in the gentleman's waiting-room of the Potomac depot gives the following account of the shooting of the President: At 9:23 two shots in rapid succession, loud and startling, rang through the depot. Just then Secretary Blaine rushed out of the ladies' waiting room asking for an officer. At the same instant almost Policeman Kearney came out of the same door having in charge the man who fired the shots, the latter waving a letter which he wished delivered to Gen. Sherman. On entering the ladies' room Gen. Garfield was being supported by the lady in charge of the room. Secretary Blaine was bending over him, saying,

"Oh! my Poor President!"
It appears that Guiteau had been waiting around the depot for half an hour and had been noticed by the lady in charge, as

Having an Evil Eye.
but with no thought of his being an assassin. He followed the President about half-way from the front door before he fired and the second shot was almost instantaneous with the first. The President seemed to take a step forward as the second shot was fired and fell. Secretary Blaine, soon after the President was removed from the depot, went to his residence. Secretary Windom remained in the depot with some friends seemingly endeavoring to get some definite idea about the assassin and the cause of his wicked attempt upon the life of the President. The theories advanced and the absurd rumors prevalent only gained in volume by repetition.

AT THE CITY HALL.
HOW THE NEWS WAS RECEIVED THERE.

One Fool Expresses a Fool's Opinion.
At the City Hall the news of the shooting of the President was received within a few minutes after it had occurred by telephone. Immediately the whole building was in a state of agitation.

Deputy Marshal Williams immediately, on the receipt of the news, telegraphed Marshal Henry, on the Cleveland train, at Wellsville, Ohio, announcing the shooting, and telling him to return immediately. Mr. R. J. Meigs, jr., said that he did not believe it at first, but he thought, under the circumstances, the would-be assassin should be hung without judge or jury or the benefit of clergy.

Deputy Clerk John R. Young got upon his muscle and fired an attorney out of his office for stating publicly therein that

"It Didn't Make Much Difference."
This attorney is a Southern man, so-called, but he took care not to hear the whistle of a Yankee bullet during the war.

Deputy Clerk Clancy, in his peculiar way, said: "I have no words to express the horror of it."
District Attorney Perry said: "I don't know that I have anything to say at present, except to call the witnesses in this case."

Col. James G. Payne, auditor of the court, said that the man who fired the shot was evidently crazy. He did not think any man in his senses would be guilty of such an atrocious and uncalculated-for act.

Col. Corbhill was early engaged in his office after the news of the shooting had occurred, but it was understood pretty well that he was engaged in the preparation of an indictment against the assassin to be immediately presented to the grand jury. No reporters and not even a note from them was admitted.

Col. Webster, Register of Wills, said he was so distressed at the occurrence he could hardly express himself. It is, indeed, a horrible affair.
Summary Punishment Proposed.
The excited crowd around the stairway at the depot demanded to know the name of the assassin, when a gentleman rose, and in a clear clear voice read aloud from a card the name of the man. Several of the excited party instantly shouted "hang him," "hang him," and rushed for the door like madmen, but were prevented by the police from going to the station-house where Guiteau was incarcerated.

The President Conscious-Anxiety for his Wife and Mother.
The President desired word to be sent to Mrs. Garfield and his mother that he was conscious and at home, and for them not to be alarmed. His request was promptly attended to. It was sent through Mrs. Dr. Edson, who telegraphed in addition that she was not despondent.

More of Guiteau's Statements.
Secretary Hunt says the shooter made an insane statement to District Attorney Corbhill about the troubles at Albany.

Another rumor is, that when he fired the shot he said: "Arthur is President now, and the Stalwarts are avenged."

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.
HOW THE NEWS WAS RECEIVED THERE.

The Attendants Horror Stricken.
The wildest excitement prevailed at the White House. The first news of the shooting was brought by a mounted policeman. He told the sad news to the doorknobs, who would not believe it at first and were

COMPLETELY HORROR-STRICKEN
when the truth burst upon them. Confusion ensued, and every effort was made to learn the exact truth. All the stairs were put in operation, and every man as taken to hear from the depot. The first information was vague, conflicting and unsatisfactory. One report was that the President had been instantly killed; another that he escaped with a slight wound, and another that he was not shot at all. Bad news travels fast, and the grief-stricken employees were not kept long in suspense.

WORD SENT TO MRS. GARFIELD.
Immediately on the receipt of the news at the Executive Mansion, Private Secretary Brown at once dispatched word to Mrs. Garfield at Long Branch, reassuring her and endeavoring to protect her from the alarming rumors that would reach her.

WHERE THE SHOT TOOK EFFECT.
In answer to a telegraphic inquiry as to the extent of the injuries made the response: "Dr. Bliss says it is not a mortal wound."

A later message was: "The President is badly injured, one shot through the arm and one through the hip. The second shot is between the hip and the kidneys. Think that the has gone into the groin. Have probed for it, without success. Five physicians are here. A man arrested and carried to jail. Two companies of soldiers are here. The President is dangerously ill, but think he will recover."

THE RAIL PROCESSION TO THE WHITE HOUSE.
The police ambulance, containing the President, arrived at the Executive Mansion about 10:25 o'clock. It was accompanied by a squad of police and the carriages containing the physicians. An excited crowd followed in the wake

The horses were driven rapidly, and when the ambulance arrived at the south entrance of the mansion no one was there but the immediate attendants and the police. Col. Rockwell superintended the removal of the President.

HOW THE PRESIDENT APPEARED.
The President lay in the ambulance propped up with pillows and with his right arm thrown over his head. His face was ashy white, but bore a calm placid look.

HE SEEMED PERFECTLY CONSCIOUS, and opened his eyes frequently to view the surroundings. While he was being carried up the stairs

HE SMILED SADLY
and waved his hand in recognition of the friends who were gathered about him. His sufferings must have been intense, but he gave no sign of it, and was as gentle and submissive as a child. A dozen willing hands assisted in carrying him to his bedroom on the second floor, to the right of the main entrance.

THE STRETCHES WAS BORNE
on the shoulders of the police and attendants. The President was gently removed to his own bed, and gave a sigh of relief as he sank upon it. Secretaries Hunt, Lincoln and Kirkwood were in attendance.

The physicians present were Surgeon-General Barnes, Dr. Bliss, Dr. Reburn, Dr. Crook, Dr. Adams, Dr. Townsend, Dr. Lincoln, and Mrs. Dr. Edson. The room was cleared, and they had a lengthy consultation. Another consultation will be held at 3 o'clock. Measurements will be taken to locate the ball.

MRS. GARFIELD SENT FOR.
Mrs. Garfield and the rest of the family were sent for and are expected to arrive here this afternoon.

MILITARY GUARDING THE WHITE HOUSE.
Adjutant-General Dunn was at the White House at the first report of the shooting and at once instituted measures for military assistance. Two companies of artillery, under Colonel R. B. Ayres, were ordered out and placed on guard at the depot and transferred to the White House after the removal of the President. The grounds were cleared and guards placed at all entrances.

IMMENSE CROWD AT THE WHITE HOUSE.
An immense crowd gathered about the entrances seeking admission, but none were allowed to enter except in special cases, as there was some fear of an uprising of the indignant populace, which might result disastrously for the would-be assassin, Adjutant-General Dunn issued an order in the afternoon to Col. Webster that the

DISTRICT MILITIA BE ORDERED OUT
and placed on guard at the jail. All the police were ordered out and did duty wherever most demanded. Major Brock was in command of the force at the White House.

THE PRESIDENT'S CONDITION AT NOON.
At noon the physicians reported that the President had rallied considerably. Dr. Bliss is in charge of the case. All regard the wounds as serious but have hope.

MEDICAL OPINIONS.
Dr. E. A. Adams stated that when the President reached the White House his pulse was 55, at noon it had risen to 80, and the President was resting comfortably. The President was cheerful and lively, but complained of a pain in the hip. He was more solicitous for his family than for himself. Dr. Adams says: "The symptoms of paralysis in the lower limbs having subsided, the first theory that the spinal cord had been injured is abandoned."

THE BALL COULD NOT BE REACHED.
The physicians have decided not to make further explorations of the ball until the President had rallied sufficiently. There is no internal hemorrhage. Fears are felt of inflammation.

THE COURTS ADJOURN.
Remarks by Judge James.

When the case of Wright vs. McClintock in the Circuit Court was called, Judge James said:

Gentlemen of the jury, the testimony in this case having been closed, I shall have to call upon you to bear it carefully in mind in order that you may satisfactorily decide the matter at a future day, a short time will serve it to be an act of simple propriety to suspend the further hearing of the case on Wednesday morning next, because on Tuesday we shall have to take up another case.

It was sitting in the trial of a criminal case where personal liberty was the question to be decided, I should feel it my duty to go on, but in a matter involving a question of money, I am not willing, nor do I think it proper that the court should sit; for at this time the Chief Magistrate of the country is dying, and probably has even now passed away, and, therefore, adjourn the conclusion of this case until Wednesday morning until the court therefore adjourn.

Tuesday morning next, the 5th, adjourn. THE ASSASSIN PEN-PICQUE APPEARS.
Charles A. Guiteau, the assassin, is a man below the average height. He is about five feet six, and is in proportion, with flat chest and narrow shoulders. His hair is black, mingled with iron-grey. His eyes
